
YOUTH KI AWAAZ WRITERS' TRAINING PROGRAM

What Is The YKA Writer's Training Program?

Completely free, the 4-week training enables you to become an impact writer by helping you understand how best to engage with issue-based writing.

With its huge social media outreach, being an intern at YKA is a unique opportunity to bring about change that matters—through storytelling and journalism.

A computer, an internet connection, and a passion for research and writing are our only requirements. Since 2010, Youth Ki Awaaz's award-winning, work-from-home online journalism training program has coached over 2,500 participants, and has become one of the most coveted training in the country.

What The Program Covers

From honing writing and communication skills to utilising social media, the program is a comprehensive learning process that aids and abets your issue-based writing and expression needs. It offers a step-ahead in your learning curve, better equipping you for your chosen career path.

“It helped me write past all my self doubt and writer's block with a new sense of confidence and sensitivity to the events and people around me.”

Upasana Bordoloi, Former Intern.

How The Program Works

Through one-on-one mentorship, you will get an opportunity to work with Youth Ki Awaaz editors with years of journalism and editorial experience.

The 4-week-long process ensures that the training, through a week-by-week growth module, will help you explore various aspects of writing, editing, reporting, interviewing, social media advocacy and more.

The modules will revolve around a broad theme (say, gender, mental health, or politics, to name a few) and will explore various dimensions to it.

How To Apply

To apply for the training, please visit www.youthkiawaaz.com/internships/ and fill out the application form. Be patient as sorting out applications takes time.

The training requires significant time commitment (min. 2 hours a day) and works on tight deadlines. Please make sure you can make this commitment before you apply.

“I learnt a lot during the traineeship. My editor pushed me to work harder and stay aware. I wrote a lot of pieces that I'm proud of. I would recommend it to all writers who are looking to hone their skills and create a portfolio at the same time.”

P. Vatsalya, 24, Trainee Reporter at Mid-Day

PROGRAM STRUCTURE

YOUTH KI AWAAZ

PHASE I

The first week will be all about learning the basics of journalistic writing; from writing a news report to publishing a balanced analytical article.

PHASE II

The second phase will move on to cover specialised formats like interviews, data-based articles, opinion pieces, profiles, and more.

PHASE III

The third, and final, phase will be devoted to working on two long-form articles, based on the intern's choice of topic and format.
